Problems faced in police verification in India:

In many cases, passports are re-issued after police verification in India. However, it does not mean that applicants have to apply for police clearance certificate to get passport. Yes, applicants may need to apply for Police clearance certificate (PCC) separately for other reasons. PCC is also issued after verification by the concerned local police authorities in India. The details in the application form (Name of the applicant, name of Parents etc.) should be as per the passport particulars. If the address and the contact details given by the applicant in India are not verifiable, the passport or PCC services can also be denied. It is therefore strongly advised that applicants give their correct address and contact details in India so that it is easily verifiable by the local police authorities. Applicants can give the address and the contact details of their family members in India who can verify and give complete information to the local police about the applicant.

Furnishing false information:

It is an offence under the Passport Act 1967 to furnish false information in the application. Passport facilities could be denied on grounds of suppression of material information, submission of incorrect particulars, wilful damage/loss of passport or unauthorized change/tampering in Passport. The Passport can be impounded or revoked for violation of one or more of the provisions of the Passport Act. Also, it is an offence to hold more than one valid passport at a time.
